

MONEY YOU'RE OWED

Subscription Audit & Cancel System

CLAIM WHAT'S RIGHTFULLY YOURS

The official process is always free. This kit doesn't sell you secrets — it's the done-for-you implementation: fill-in letters, word-for-word scripts, and trackers that save you the hours. Every method is built on official 2026 U.S. rules (DOT, IRS, CFPB, FDIC, state programs).

The Subscription Audit & Cancel System

Money You're Owed — practical tools for getting back the money that's rightfully yours.

The promise: Find every recurring charge draining your account, cancel the ones you don't want even when a company makes it hard, and force a refund when a cancellation is wrongly ignored — using the exact scripts and trackers inside.

This is implementation, not a secret. The official process is always free.

Every method in this kit uses processes that are free to do yourself. You never have to pay a company to cancel a subscription, dispute a charge, or enforce your rights. There is no "finder's fee," no insider trick, and no paid gatekeeper.

What you're paying for here is time and done-for-you wording — the trackers, the word-for-word scripts, and the dispute letters already written so you don't have to figure out what to say or research the law yourself. If you'd rather do all of it from scratch for free, you can. This kit just makes it fast.

A note on the law (read this — it changed in 2025)

You may have heard about the FTC's "click-to-cancel" rule, which would have forced companies to make canceling as easy as signing up. As of 2026, that rule is NOT in force. A federal appeals court (the Eighth Circuit) vacated it on July 8, 2025 (Custom Communications, Inc. v. FTC), days before it would have taken effect, on procedural grounds. The FTC restarted the rulemaking in early 2026 (it sent a draft Advance Notice of Proposed Rulemaking to the White House budget office on January 30, 2026), but there is no federal click-to-cancel rule in force right now. (Sources: 8th Cir. opinion, July 8, 2025; FTC ANPRM, Jan. 30, 2026.)

We tell you this because honesty is the whole brand. A lot of scripts floating around the internet still cite "click-to-cancel" as if it's the law. If you send a company a demand based on a vacated rule, a sharp customer-service rep can dismiss you.

The good news: plenty of other law is still fully in force and still protects you. This kit is built on what's actually enforceable in 2026:

- ROSCA (Restore Online Shoppers' Confidence Act), 15 U.S.C. §§ 8401–8405 — still law. Requires clear disclosure, your express consent before charging, and a simple mechanism to stop recurring charges for anything you signed up for online.
- Section 5 of the FTC Act, 15 U.S.C. § 45 — bans unfair and deceptive practices, including making cancellation a deliberate runaround.
- State auto-renewal laws — many states protect you, and California's (Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17600–17606), strengthened effective July 1, 2025, now requires same-medium / "click-to-cancel" online cancellation for subscriptions sold to California consumers.
- The Fair Credit Billing Act (FCBA), 15 U.S.C. § 1666 — your right to dispute a credit-card charge in writing within 60 days, including charges for "services not delivered as agreed" (e.g., a subscription you canceled but were billed for anyway).

Every script in this kit names the law it relies on and uses it correctly. Where a protection only applies in certain states, we say so.

How to use this kit (5 steps)

1. Run the audit (Asset 01). Pull 2–3 months of statements and list every recurring charge in the tracker. This is the step that surfaces the charges people most often forget about — the idle streaming tier, the trial that converted, the app billed through Apple. Whatever yours add up to is money back in your pocket.
2. Decide: keep, cancel, or pause. Mark each line in the tracker.
3. Cancel the easy ones yourself. Most cancellations take two clicks in account settings. Use the kit's scripts only for the services that fight back.
4. Use the scripts when a company stalls. Retention "save" offers, phone-only cancellation, "we'll cancel at end of term" runarounds — there's a counter-script for each (Assets 02–05).
5. Escalate if a cancellation is ignored and you're billed anyway. Send the written cancellation-confirmation demand (Asset 06), then the card dispute (Asset 07) if the charge still posts.

Table of Contents

#	Asset	What it is
00	This page	Title, disclaimer, how-to-use
01	The Audit Method & Subscription Tracker	Statement-scan walkthrough + the master tracker (also delivered as an importable .csv)
02	Cancellation Scripts — Hard-to-Cancel Services	Word-for-word scripts for phone, chat, and email cancellation that won't be stalled

#	Asset	What it is
03	Retention / "Save Offer" Counter-Scripts	Exact replies to "Can I offer you 50% off to stay?" and other save tactics
04	The Online Cancellation Demand (ROSCA + State Law)	A script/letter invoking the laws that ARE in force in 2026 — used when a company hides or blocks online cancellation
05	Free-Trial Tracker & Auto-Renew Defense	A tracker to kill trials before they convert + scripts for free-to-paid conversions
06	Cancellation-Confirmation Demand	Forces written proof your cancellation was processed, so you can dispute later if needed
07	Card Chargeback / Dispute-Escalation Letter (FCBA)	The written billing-error dispute for when a cancellation is wrongly refused or you're charged after canceling
—	subscription-tracker.csv	The subscription tracker, ready to import into Excel / Google Sheets / Numbers
—	free-trial-tracker.csv	The free-trial tracker, same import-ready format

Money You're Owed publishes free videos and PDFs that teach the "what." This paid kit is the done-for-you "how." Nothing here gates a right you already have. Laws change — every script names the statute it relies on so you can verify it's still current.

This kit is general information, not legal advice, and does not create an attorney–client relationship. For a specific dispute involving large sums or a contract you don't understand, consult a licensed attorney or your state attorney general / consumer-protection office.

Asset 01 — The Audit Method & Subscription Tracker

When/how to use this: Do this first, once, then refresh it every 3 months. It's the find step — surfacing every recurring charge before you decide what to kill. Budget 30–45 minutes for the first pass.

What law backs it: None needed — this is your own money and your own statements. No law required to look.

Step 1 — Pull your sources (10 min)

You need 2 to 3 full months of records so you catch monthly and quarterly/annual charges. Pull from all of these — recurring charges hide across multiple accounts:

- [] Every credit card statement (download the PDF/CSV, don't just eyeball the app)
- [] Every debit card / checking account statement
- [] PayPal → Settings → Payments → Manage automatic payments (this is the #1 hiding spot)
- [] Apple → Settings → your name → Subscriptions (App Store bills you, not the app)
- [] Google Play → Payments & subscriptions → Subscriptions
- [] Amazon → Account → Memberships & Subscriptions (Prime, Subscribe & Save, Channels, Audible)
- [] Any buy-now-pay-later apps (Klarna, Afterpay, Affirm) — they renew memberships too

Tip: In a downloaded statement, use Ctrl-F / search for the same merchant name and watch for it repeating monthly. Recurring charges are usually identical to the penny.

Step 2 — Flag every repeat (10 min)

A charge is a subscription if it shows up on the same date range each cycle for the same amount. Common disguises:

- A company name you don't recognize (search the exact billing descriptor online — e.g., "DRI*EXAMPLE" is a reseller billing for some other app).
- A charge of $0.00 or $1.00 = a free trial or card-authorization. That trial has a conversion date. Get it into the Free-Trial Tracker (Asset 05) immediately.
- Annual charges — easy to miss because they only hit once a year. Look back 12 months for anything over ~$40 that recurs yearly.

Step 3 — Fill the tracker (15 min)

For each recurring charge, fill one row. The columns and what they mean:

Column	What to put	Why it matters
Service	The product name (e.g., "Adobe Creative Cloud")	What it actually is
Billing descriptor	The exact text on your statement	So you can match the charge later / dispute it
Cost	The amount per cycle	The number you're deciding on
Billing cycle	Monthly / Quarterly / Annual	Annals sneak up on you
Renewal date	Next charge date	Your deadline clock
Last used	When you actually used it (your honest guess)	The single best signal of "cancel this"
Cancel-by date	Latest date to cancel and avoid the next charge	Usually 1–3 days before renewal; some require advance notice — check the terms
Cancel method	Where/how you cancel (account settings URL, phone #, etc.)	Saves you the hunt later
Decision	KEEP / CANCEL / PAUSE	Your call
Status	To do / Cancel requested / Confirmed canceled / Disputing	Tracks the kill to completion

Step 4 — The keep/cancel decision rule

Be honest about Last used:

- Used in the last 30 days and would miss it → KEEP.
- Haven't used in 60+ days → CANCEL. (This is where the money is.)
- Seasonal or "might need it" → PAUSE if the service allows it; otherwise CANCEL and re-subscribe when you actually need it. Re-subscribing is almost always cheaper than paying for idle months.
- Duplicate (two streaming services you never watch both of) → CANCEL the one used less.

Step 5 — Work the kill list to "Confirmed canceled"

A subscription is not canceled until you have written confirmation. "I clicked cancel" is not proof. For each CANCEL row:

1. Cancel via the easy method first (account settings).
2. If the company stalls, hides the cancel button, or forces a phone call → use Asset 02 (cancellation scripts) and Asset 03 (retention counters).
3. If they block online cancellation entirely → Asset 04 (ROSCA / state-law demand).
4. The moment you cancel, get proof → Asset 06 (confirmation demand). Save the confirmation email/number in your tracker.
5. If you're billed after canceling → Asset 07 (card dispute).

The Tracker (blank — copy this, or import subscription-tracker.csv)

Service	Billing descriptor	Cost	Cycle	Renewal date	Last used	Cancel-by	Cancel method	Decision	Status

Worked example (so you can see what "done" looks like)

Service	Billing descriptor	Cost	Cycle	Renewal date	Last used	Cancel-by	Cancel method	Decision	Status
Streaming Co.	STREAMINGCO.COM	$15.99	Monthly	07/22/2026	This week	—	Account → Membership	KEEP	—
Fitness App	DRI*FITAPP	$9.99	Monthly	07/03/2026	Jan 2026	07/02/2026	App Store → Subscriptions	CANCEL	Confirmed canceled
Cloud Storage	EXAMPLECLOUD	$99.00	Annual	11/14/2026	Mar 2026	11/11/2026	Phone 1-800-... (no online cancel)	CANCEL	Cancel requested
News+ (trial)	NEWSPLUS TRIAL	$0.00	Trial → $12.99	converts 06/18/2026	Never	06/17/2026	Account → Cancel trial	CANCEL	To do

At the bottom of your tracker, total the "CANCEL" column. That monthly number × 12 is what this audit just put back in your pocket every year.

Asset 02 — Cancellation Scripts for Hard-to-Cancel Services

When/how to use this: Use these when a service won't let you cancel in account settings and forces you into a phone call, a chat, or an email — and then tries to stall, guilt, or "transfer" you. Pick the script for your channel (phone / chat / email). Read it nearly verbatim; the wording is chosen to close the loop and get proof.

What law backs it: You don't need to cite a law to cancel — these are firm, plain requests. But if the rep refuses or blocks you, the legal demand in Asset 04 (ROSCA / state auto-renewal law) is the next step. For retention/save offers specifically, use Asset 03.

The 3 rules that make every cancellation stick

1. Don't argue, don't explain. You don't owe a reason. "It no longer fits my needs" ends the conversation; "well, money's tight and my kid started..." invites a save offer. Give no opening.
2. Use the word "cancel," not "pause," "downgrade," or "think about." Reps are trained to convert soft language into a save.
3. Demand written confirmation before you hang up. No confirmation = not canceled. (See Asset 06.)

SCRIPT A — Phone cancellation

Opening (say this immediately, before they pitch):

"Hi. I'm calling to cancel my [SERVICE] subscription on the account under [NAME / ACCOUNT EMAIL / ACCOUNT NUMBER], effective today. I've already made my decision, so I don't need to hear any offers. Please process the cancellation and give me a confirmation number."

If they ask why you're canceling:

"It no longer fits my needs. I'd like to proceed with the cancellation, please."

(Repeat that one sentence as many times as needed. Do not add detail.)

If they offer a discount or free months (hand off to Asset 03 if you're tempted; otherwise):

"I appreciate it, but I'm not looking for an offer. Please cancel the subscription effective today."

If they say "I can only pause it" or "I'll downgrade you":

"I'm not asking to pause or downgrade. I'm asking you to cancel the subscription entirely. If you're not able to do that, please transfer me to someone who can, or tell me the exact steps to cancel."

If they say it's already "scheduled to cancel at the end of the term" (and you want it stopped now / no further charges):

"Please confirm in writing that no further charges will be made to my card after today, and that the subscription will not auto-renew. What's the last date I'll have access, and what confirmation number can I reference?"

Closing (always get these three things):

"Before we finish, please confirm three things: one, the cancellation is processed effective [DATE]; two, no further charges will be made; three, you'll email written confirmation to [EMAIL] today. What's my confirmation number?"

Write in your tracker: date, time, rep's name, confirmation number.

SCRIPT B — Live chat cancellation

Paste this as your opening message:

"I'm requesting cancellation of my [SERVICE] subscription, account [EMAIL / ACCOUNT #], effective today. I've already decided and won't be accepting retention offers. Please confirm the cancellation and send written confirmation to my email. Please also confirm that no further charges will be made after today."

If the bot/agent loops you ("Are you sure? You'll lose..."):

"Yes, I'm sure. Please proceed with the cancellation now and provide a confirmation number."

If they say you must call to cancel:

"Per the terms I agreed to, I signed up [online/in this app]. Please cancel through this same channel, or escalate to someone who can. If a phone call is the only option, please provide the direct number and a reference number for this chat so I'm not restarting from scratch."

Always screenshot the chat or request the transcript by email. Chat transcripts are excellent dispute evidence.

SCRIPT C — Email / written cancellation

Use when there's a cancellation email address, or as a paper trail after a phone/chat cancellation. Send from the email on the account.

Subject: Cancellation request — [SERVICE] — account [ACCOUNT # / EMAIL]

To Whom It May Concern,

I am canceling my [SERVICE] subscription, effective immediately. My account details are:

- Name on account: [NAME]
- Account email / number: [EMAIL / ACCOUNT #]
- Billing descriptor I see on my statement: [DESCRIPTOR]

Please process this cancellation today and confirm in writing:

1. The cancellation is effective as of [DATE];
2. No further charges will be made to my payment method after that date;
3. The subscription will not auto-renew.

Please send written confirmation and a reference number to this email address. If any further action is required from me to complete the cancellation, tell me exactly what it is in your reply.

Thank you, [NAME] [DATE]

What to do if they simply won't cancel

If the company refuses, makes cancellation impossible, or hides the option for a subscription you signed up for online → escalate to Asset 04 (the ROSCA / state-law demand letter). If they cancel "going forward" but charge you again anyway → Asset 06 then Asset 07 (card dispute).

Asset 03 — Retention / "Save Offer" Counter-Scripts

When/how to use this: The moment a rep or chatbot tries to keep you with a discount, free months, a downgrade, or a guilt trip. Find the tactic they used below and read the matching reply. Each one is built to either (a) get you out clean, or (b) extract a genuinely good deal if you'd actually stay for the right price.

What law backs it: None — this is negotiation, not a legal demand. (If they cross from "offering" into "refusing to let you cancel," switch to Asset 04.)

First, decide your real goal before you pick up the phone

- Goal = OUT, no matter what. Then every offer gets a polite "No, please cancel." Don't let a 50%-off number reactivate the part of your brain that signed up in the first place. You already decided this is dead weight in your audit.
- Goal = stay only if it's genuinely cheaper. Then you can let them bid. Set your number in advance ("I'll stay at $X/month, otherwise cancel") and don't move off it.

Either way, the scripts below keep you in control.

Tactic 1 — "I can give you 50% off / three months free to stay."

If you want OUT:

"I appreciate that, but a discount doesn't change my decision. Please cancel the subscription effective today."

If you'd stay for the right price:

"I'll stay if you can lock that rate in for the next 12 billing cycles, in writing. If it's only a few months and then snaps back to full price, I'd rather cancel today. Can you do 12 months at that rate, yes or no?"

(If yes: get it in writing with an end date and the rate. If no: "Then please cancel today.")

Tactic 2 — "Let me just pause your account instead."

"No, I don't want a pause — a pause leaves the account open and I'll be right back here in a few months. Please cancel it entirely, effective today, with no auto-renewal."

Tactic 3 — "You'll lose all your data / history / progress."

"I understand, and I've accepted that. Please proceed with the cancellation. If there's a way to export my data first, tell me how and I'll do it now — but I still want the cancellation processed today."

Tactic 4 — "Let me downgrade you to the cheaper plan."

If you want OUT:

"I'm not looking to downgrade. I want to cancel completely. Please process that today."

If a cheaper plan actually works for you:

"What exactly does the cheaper plan include, what does it cost per cycle, and is that price permanent or promotional? Email me those terms."

If it's permanent and covers [the one thing you use], I'll move to it; otherwise cancel."

Tactic 5 — "I'll need to transfer you to the retention department."

"That's fine. Before you transfer me, please note on the account that I've requested cancellation effective today, and give me a reference number for this call. I'd like the cancellation honored as of now even if the transfer drops."

(This protects your cancel date if the call "accidentally" disconnects during transfer — a known stall tactic.)

Tactic 6 — "We can only cancel at the end of your billing term" (you want no more charges)

"Please confirm in writing that today's request stops any auto-renewal and that no charge will be made on or after [NEXT RENEWAL DATE]. I'm fine using the service until the paid period ends, but I will not be charged again. Please send that confirmation and a reference number to [EMAIL]."

Tactic 7 — "Are you sure? Most people regret canceling."

(Guilt / FUD. Don't engage the emotion.)

"Yes, I'm sure. Please cancel the subscription now and send me written confirmation."

Tactic 8 — The chatbot loop ("Click here to keep your benefits...")

Don't click the "keep" path. Type:

"Cancel my subscription. Do not apply an offer. Confirm cancellation and email me confirmation."

If it keeps looping, ask for a human: "Connect me to a live agent to process a cancellation."

Tactic 9 — They go silent / "system is down, call back later."

"I understand the system may be down. Please log my cancellation request with today's date and time as the effective date, and email me a reference number now confirming the request was received. I should not be charged for any period after today."

(Get the request time-stamped today. That timestamp is your evidence if they bill you again — feed it into Asset 06 / 07.)

The universal closer (use after any save attempt)

"Thanks. To confirm: the subscription is canceled effective [DATE], there will be no further charges, and you're emailing written confirmation to [EMAIL] now. What's my confirmation number?"

No confirmation number + no email = treat it as NOT canceled. Keep going, or escalate to Asset 04.

Asset 04 — The Online Cancellation Demand (ROSCA + State Auto-Renewal Law)

When/how to use this: Use this when a company makes it genuinely hard or impossible to cancel a subscription you signed up for online — no cancel button in your account, forced phone-only cancellation with endless holds, a cancel flow that errors out, or a flat refusal. Send it in writing (email to their support/legal/privacy address, or via their contact form, from the email on your account). It raises the stakes from a routine request to a documented legal demand.

What law backs it (and what does NOT — read this):

- DO NOT cite the FTC "click-to-cancel" rule. A federal appeals court vacated it on July 8, 2025 (Custom Communications, Inc. v. FTC, 8th Cir.) and it is not in force in 2026. If you cite it, an informed rep can dismiss your whole letter. The scripts in this kit deliberately rely on law that is still enforceable:
- ROSCA — Restore Online Shoppers' Confidence Act, 15 U.S.C. §§ 8401–8405. Still law. For anything sold via a negative-option feature on the internet, the seller must provide simple mechanisms for a consumer to stop recurring charges (15 U.S.C. § 8403). Blocking or burying cancellation conflicts with this.
- Section 5 of the FTC Act, 15 U.S.C. § 45 — prohibits unfair or deceptive practices, which the FTC has applied to cancellation runarounds.
- State auto-renewal laws. Many states have them. California's Automatic Renewal Law (Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17600–17606), strengthened by AB 2863 effective July 1, 2025, now generally requires businesses to let consumers cancel through the same medium they used to sign up — i.e., an online "click-to-cancel" path for online sign-ups — and bars obstructing cancellation. Use the California paragraph only if you are a California consumer (or the company operates there); otherwise check your own state's auto-renewal law and substitute it, or rely on the federal ROSCA paragraph alone.

Use the bracketed California paragraph only if it applies to you. If you're not in a state with an auto-renewal cancellation law, delete that paragraph — the ROSCA and FTC Act grounds stand on their own for online subscriptions.

The Demand Letter

Subject: Formal cancellation demand and request for confirmation — [SERVICE], account [ACCOUNT # / EMAIL]

To [COMPANY] Customer Support / Legal Department,

I am writing to demand cancellation of my subscription to [SERVICE], and to document that your cancellation process has so far prevented me from doing so.

Account details - Name on account: [NAME] - Account email / number: [EMAIL / ACCOUNT #] - Billing descriptor on my statements: [DESCRIPTOR] - Approximate charge: [$AMOUNT] per [CYCLE]

What happened I signed up for this subscription online on [DATE / approx]. I have attempted to cancel on [DATE(S)] by [describe: "using your account settings, where no cancellation option exists" / "calling [NUMBER] and being placed on hold for [TIME] / transferred repeatedly" / "your cancel flow returned an error" / etc.]. I have been unable to complete a cancellation.

The law Because I purchased this subscription through an online negative-option feature, the Restore Online Shoppers' Confidence Act (ROSCA), 15 U.S.C. § 8403, requires you to provide simple mechanisms for a consumer to stop recurring charges. Obstructing or omitting an accessible cancellation method is also inconsistent with Section 5 of the FTC Act, 15 U.S.C. § 45, which prohibits unfair and deceptive practices.

[INCLUDE ONLY IF YOU ARE A CALIFORNIA CONSUMER: As a California consumer, I am also protected by California's Automatic Renewal Law, Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17600–17606, which — as amended effective July 1, 2025 — requires that I be able to cancel through the same medium I used to enroll, and prohibits obstructing cancellation. Because I enrolled online, I am entitled to cancel online.]

What I am demanding 1. Cancel my subscription effective today, [DATE], and stop all auto-renewal. 2. Confirm in writing to this email that the cancellation is processed, the effective date, and that no further charges will be made to my payment method. 3. Provide a reference number for this request.

If I am charged again after the date of this letter, I will treat the charge as billing for a service I have canceled and will dispute it with my card issuer as a billing error under the Fair Credit Billing Act, 15 U.S.C. § 1666, and I reserve the right to report the practice to the Federal Trade Commission (reportfraud.ftc.gov) and to my state attorney general's consumer-protection office.

Please respond within 5 business days.

[NAME] [DATE] [PHONE / EMAIL]

After you send it

- Save everything: a copy of this letter, the send date, and any reply. This bundle is your evidence for a card dispute.
- Cross off in your tracker: set Status to "Cancel requested" with today's date.
- If they comply: great — get the confirmation, set Status to "Confirmed canceled," and you're done.
- If they ignore you or charge you again: go to Asset 06 (confirmation demand) if you still lack written proof, then Asset 07 (FCBA card dispute). You have a clean paper trail now, which is exactly what wins a dispute.
- Optional escalation that gets fast results: file a short complaint at reportfraud.ftc.gov and with your state attorney general. Companies often resolve a stuck cancellation within days once a regulator complaint number is attached.

Asset 05 — Free-Trial Tracker & Auto-Renew Defense

When/how to use this: The instant you start any free trial. Most "I got charged for something I forgot about" money is a trial that silently converted. This tracker kills the conversion before it happens, and the scripts handle the case where you were charged after a trial.

What law backs it: For online trials, ROSCA (15 U.S.C. §§ 8401–8405) requires clear disclosure of material terms, your express informed consent before being charged, and a simple way to stop charges. California's ARL (Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17600–17606, as amended July 1, 2025) now expressly covers "free-to-pay conversions." If a trial converted without clear consent, that's your leverage (and your card-dispute basis under the FCBA, 15 U.S.C. § 1666).

The one rule that beats every free trial

On the day you start a trial, cancel it immediately — but keep using it until the trial ends. With most services, canceling does not cut off access early; it just stops the auto-conversion. You get the full free period and zero risk of forgetting. If a service does cut access on cancel, set the calendar reminder instead (below).

The Free-Trial Tracker (copy this, or import free-trial-tracker.csv)

Service	Trial started	Trial length	Converts (charge date)	Card on file	"Cancel by" reminder set?	Canceled?	Confirmation #

The two columns that matter most: - Converts (charge date) — the exact day the free trial becomes a paid charge. Get this from the sign-up confirmation email; it's almost always stated. - "Cancel by" reminder — set a phone/calendar alert for 2 days before the convert date. Two days, not the same day, so a weekend or a slow cancel-flow can't beat you.

Use a dedicated trick if you want zero risk: start trials on a virtual / single-use card number (offered by many banks and apps) with a low limit. If you forget to cancel, the conversion charge simply declines, and a declined charge can't quietly drain your account. This is legal and is your money — you're just controlling your own card.

If a trial already converted and you were charged

Script A — "Cancel and refund this trial conversion" (chat or email)

"I'm contacting you about a charge of [$AMOUNT] on [DATE] for [SERVICE]. I signed up for a free trial on [DATE] and did not intend to continue into a paid subscription. Please cancel the subscription effective today and refund this charge, as it is the first charge immediately following the trial. Please confirm the cancellation and refund in writing to [EMAIL] with a reference number."

If they refuse the refund:

"I'd like to escalate. The trial's conversion to a paid charge was not something I clearly consented to. Please have a supervisor review a refund of this first post-trial charge. If you're unable to refund it, please confirm that in writing so I can dispute the charge with my card issuer as a billing error."

(That written refusal is gold — it's the documentation your card issuer wants for an FCBA dispute. Then go to Asset 07.)

Script B — Phone version (opening)

"I was charged [$AMOUNT] on [DATE] right after a free trial of [SERVICE] that I didn't intend to keep. I'm asking you to cancel the subscription today and refund that first charge. Can you process both, and give me a confirmation number?"

Preventing the next one

- Every trial goes in the tracker the day you start it. No exceptions.
- Screenshot the trial terms at sign-up — the price after trial, the convert date, and the cancellation instructions. If the terms weren't clearly disclosed, that screenshot (or its absence) supports a dispute.

- Watch for $0.00 / $1.00 authorizations on your statement (see Asset 01). Those mark a trial with a future convert date.

Asset 06 — The Cancellation-Confirmation Demand

When/how to use this: Use this the moment you've asked to cancel but don't yet have written proof the cancellation went through — for example, you canceled by phone and only got a verbal "you're all set," or you submitted an online cancel flow that didn't email you anything. A cancellation you can't prove is a cancellation you'll lose if they bill you again. This short demand forces the company to put it in writing, which is the exact evidence a card issuer wants if you later need to dispute (Asset 07). Send it from the email on your account.

What law backs it: No single statute requires a "confirmation email," so this is framed as a firm request, not a legal threat. But it sets up two real protections: if you signed up online, ROSCA (15 U.S.C. § 8403) requires a simple way to stop recurring charges; and if they charge you after this, you have a dated paper trail to dispute the charge as a billing error under the Fair Credit Billing Act (15 U.S.C. § 1666) for credit cards, or under the Electronic Fund Transfer Act / Regulation E (15 U.S.C. § 1693 et seq.) for debit cards.

Why this tiny step matters more than it looks

Most "they charged me after I canceled" disputes are lost for one reason: the customer can't prove the cancellation date. The company says "we have no record of a cancellation," and without written proof, it's your word against theirs. This one-paragraph demand fixes that. It takes two minutes and converts a vague verbal cancellation into dated, written evidence.

The Confirmation Demand (email)

Subject: Please confirm in writing — cancellation of [SERVICE], account [ACCOUNT # / EMAIL]

To [COMPANY] Customer Support,

On [DATE], I requested cancellation of my [SERVICE] subscription [by phone with a representative / through your online account settings / via live chat — pick one]. [If you have one: My reference/confirmation number for that request is [REF #].]

I have not yet received written confirmation, so I am requesting it now. Please reply to this email confirming the following:

1. My subscription is canceled, effective [DATE OF YOUR ORIGINAL REQUEST];
2. The subscription will not auto-renew;
3. No further charges will be made to my payment method on or after that date;
4. The date my access ends (if applicable).

Account details for your reference: - Name on account: [NAME] - Account email / number: [EMAIL / ACCOUNT #] - Billing descriptor on my statement: [DESCRIPTOR]

If your records do not show my cancellation, please treat this email as a renewed cancellation request effective today and confirm it the same way. Please reply within 5 business days.

Thank you, [NAME] [DATE]

After you send it

- File the email and any reply in the same place you keep your tracker. The reply (or the absence of one, with your sent-date stamp) is your evidence.
- Update your tracker: set Status to "Confirmed canceled" once you have the written confirmation. Paste the confirmation number / email date into the "Confirmation # or Email" column.
- If they confirm but then charge you anyway, or if they ignore this and a charge posts → go straight to Asset 07 (the card-dispute letter). You now have exactly the dated paper trail that wins those disputes.
- If you signed up online and they're stonewalling cancellation entirely, escalate with the legal demand in Asset 04 (ROSCA / state auto-renewal law) before disputing.

Asset 07 — The Chargeback / Billing-Dispute Letter (FCBA & EFTA)

When/how to use this: Use this when a company charged you after you canceled, kept billing a subscription you ended, or refused to honor a cancellation — and you've already tried to resolve it directly (Assets 04/06). This is a written dispute you send to your card issuer or bank, not the merchant. It invokes your statutory billing-error rights. Send it in writing even if you also dispute online or by phone — the written notice is what triggers the strongest legal protections and deadlines.

What law backs it — and pick the RIGHT one for your card:

- Credit card → Fair Credit Billing Act (FCBA), 15 U.S.C. § 1666. You may dispute a "billing error," which includes a charge for goods or services not accepted or not delivered as agreed — exactly the situation when you're billed for a subscription you canceled. You must send written notice within 60 days after the issuer transmitted the first statement showing the error. The issuer must acknowledge within 30 days and resolve within two billing cycles (no more than 90 days). (Source: 15 U.S.C. § 1666(a)–(b).) Separately, your liability for genuinely unauthorized credit-card use is capped at $50 under 15 U.S.C. § 1643.
- Debit card / bank account → Electronic Fund Transfer Act (EFTA), 15 U.S.C. § 1693 et seq., and Regulation E (12 C.F.R. part 1005). The FCBA does not cover debit cards. Report the error to your bank, generally within 60 days of the statement showing it. The bank typically has 10 business days to investigate (extendable to 45 if it gives provisional credit). (Source: EFTA § 1693f; Reg. E § 1005.11.)

The 60-day clock is real — don't sit on it. Count 60 days from the date of the statement that first showed the wrongful charge. Send your written dispute well inside that window.

Before you send: have your evidence ready

Attach copies (never originals) of: - The statement line showing the disputed charge (highlight it). - Your cancellation confirmation, or the cancellation request you sent (Asset 04 / 06) with its date. - Any company reply, including a refusal to cancel or refund. - Your tracker row for this service.

A dispute backed by a dated cancellation request wins far more often than a bare "I didn't authorize this."

LETTER A — Credit card (FCBA billing-error dispute)

Send to the "billing inquiries" address on your statement or issuer's website — not the payment address. Send it so you have proof of delivery (certified mail, or the issuer's secure-message system with a saved copy).

Re: Billing-error dispute under the Fair Credit Billing Act, 15 U.S.C. § 1666 Account number: [CARD ACCOUNT # — last 4 or full as issuer requires]

To Whom It May Concern,

I am writing to dispute a billing error on my account under the Fair Credit Billing Act, 15 U.S.C. § 1666. The disputed charge is:

- Merchant / billing descriptor: [DESCRIPTOR]
- Amount: [$AMOUNT]
- Date of charge: [DATE]
- Statement date it appeared: [STATEMENT DATE]

This charge is a billing error because it is for goods or services that were not accepted or not delivered as agreed. I canceled this subscription on [CANCELLATION DATE] [by phone / online / in writing], and [I received written confirmation of the cancellation, a copy of which is enclosed / I have enclosed my dated cancellation request]. The merchant billed me for a subscription I had already canceled, so I did not accept or agree to this charge.

[If applicable: I contacted the merchant on [DATE(S)] to resolve this and request a refund. The merchant [refused / did not respond / acknowledged the cancellation but charged me anyway]. Copies of that correspondence are enclosed.]

Under 15 U.S.C. § 1666, please: 1. Acknowledge receipt of this dispute within 30 days; 2. Investigate and either correct the error or explain your findings within two complete billing cycles (and no later than 90 days); 3. Remove the disputed amount, and any related finance charges or fees, from my balance while the dispute is pending; 4. Report the disputed amount as "in dispute" to any credit bureau if you report on this account during the investigation.

Please send written confirmation of the resolution to the address above.

Sincerely, [YOUR NAME] [Enclosures: statement excerpt; cancellation confirmation / request; merchant correspondence]

LETTER B — Debit card / bank account (EFTA / Regulation E error notice)

Use this version when the charge hit a debit card or bank account. Send to your bank's error-resolution / dispute address.

[YOUR NAME] [YOUR ADDRESS] [DATE]

[BANK NAME] Electronic Fund Transfer Error Resolution [BANK DISPUTE ADDRESS]

Re: Notice of error under the Electronic Fund Transfer Act, 15 U.S.C. § 1693f, and Regulation E Account number: [BANK / DEBIT ACCOUNT #]

To Whom It May Concern,

I am notifying you of an error involving an electronic fund transfer from my account, under the Electronic Fund Transfer Act and Regulation E (12 C.F.R. § 1005.11). The transaction in question is:

- Merchant / descriptor: [DESCRIPTOR]
- Amount: [$AMOUNT]
- Date posted: [DATE]
- Statement date it appeared: [STATEMENT DATE]

This transfer is in error. I canceled the subscription with this merchant on [CANCELLATION DATE], and the merchant nevertheless charged my account afterward. I did not authorize a charge for a subscription I had already canceled. [Enclosed are my cancellation confirmation/request dated [DATE] and any merchant correspondence.]

Please investigate this error as required by Regulation E. I understand you generally have 10 business days to investigate (and may provide provisional credit and extend the investigation to 45 days). Please reverse the disputed transfer and notify me of the results in writing at the address above.

Sincerely, [YOUR NAME] [Enclosures: statement excerpt; cancellation confirmation / request; merchant correspondence]

What to expect after you send it

- Credit card (FCBA): The issuer must acknowledge within 30 days and resolve within two billing cycles / 90 days. While the dispute is pending, you don't have to pay the disputed amount, and they can't report it as delinquent for that reason. Most subscription disputes with a dated cancellation attached are resolved in your favor.
- Debit card (EFTA): The bank usually decides within 10 business days, or gives you provisional credit and takes up to 45 days. Provisional credit means the money is back in your account while they investigate.
- If the dispute is denied: ask for the denial in writing and the evidence they relied on. You can re-dispute with the cancellation proof, file a complaint with the CFPB at consumerfinance.gov/complaint (free, and banks respond fast to it), and report the merchant to the FTC at reportfraud.ftc.gov and your state attorney general.

One honest caveat

A chargeback is a powerful, legitimate tool — use it when a charge is genuinely wrong. It is not a way to get free months of a service you actually used and simply forgot to cancel. Dispute the charges that posted after your cancellation date, not the legitimate ones before it. Keeping your dispute clean and accurate is what keeps it winnable — and keeps your account in good standing.
