

MONEY YOU'RE OWED

Unclaimed Money Tracker

CLAIM WHAT'S RIGHTFULLY YOURS

The official process is always free. This kit doesn't sell you secrets — it's the done-for-you implementation: fill-in letters, word-for-word scripts, and trackers that save you the hours. Every method is built on official 2026 U.S. rules (DOT, IRS, CFPB, FDIC, state programs).

The Unclaimed Money Tracker

Find AND claim every dollar you're owed — across every official US source, not just your state.

Money You're Owed — the official process is always free. Never pay a finder.

One-line promise: A done-with-you system that walks you through every official, free place Americans have unclaimed money — state property, tax refunds, old pensions, failed banks, savings bonds, lost 401(k)s, settlements, deposits, life insurance, and FHA refunds — in the right order, with the real free link for each, plus a tracker so nothing slips.

This is implementation, not information. Every dollar this system helps you find can be claimed for free through an official government or company channel. You never have to pay anyone a fee — or a percentage of your own money — to "find," "release," or "expedite" what's yours. If a website asks for that, close the tab. What you're paying $9 for here is the done-for-you system: the complete source list with verified free links, the order to check them in, and the tracker that keeps it all moving. We sell the time-saver, never the right.

What's in this product

File	What it is
00-PRODUCT.md	This file — title page, how to use, the 30-minute plan
01-master-source-checklist.md	Every official place Americans have unclaimed money — what it is, who's likely owed, the official free URL, and what you need to claim
02-search-workflow.md	The exact order to check the sources in — a ~30-minute sprint, fastest free wins first
03-how-to-use-the-tracker.md	Quick-start: set up your claim tracker in Google Sheets (or print it), and the status flow
04-printable-tracker.md	A printable claim-tracker page you can fill in by hand
unclaimed-money-tracker.csv	The importable tracker — drop straight into Google Sheets, Excel, or Notion

How to use this in 30 minutes

You do not need to do all of this at once, and you do not need every source. Most people are owed money in two or three places, not eleven. The plan is built so the fastest, highest-odds searches come first — if you only have ten minutes, the first three steps are where the money usually is.

1. Open the tracker (unclaimed-money-tracker.csv → import to Google Sheets, or print 04-printable-tracker.md).
2. Work the search workflow (02-search-workflow.md) top to bottom. It routes you through each source in order.
3. Log every hit as a row: source, what it is, estimated amount, the official link, and the next action.
4. File the easy ones the same day. State unclaimed property and an IRS refund check are often a few minutes each.
5. Set follow-up dates for anything that needs documents or a wait. Check your tracker weekly.

The one rule that protects you: the official sites in this kit are the real front doors, and they are all free. A "finder" or "asset recovery" company that contacts you offering to get your money for a cut is selling you something you can do yourself for nothing. (Some state and federal programs even cap or ban finder fees.) Start with the free link every time.

A note on what "unclaimed money" really is

It is not a lottery and it is not a scam — it's ordinary money that lost track of its owner: a deposit you forgot, a final paycheck that bounced back, a refund check that never reached you, a pension from a job two decades ago, a savings bond a grandparent bought. By law, a business that can't return your money usually has to turn it over to the government, which holds it for you — in most cases with no deadline to claim it. This kit is the map to all of those front doors.

The Master Source Checklist

This is the heart of the kit: every major official source of unclaimed money in the United States, each with what it is, who's most likely owed, the official free link, and exactly what you need to claim. Every link routes to a government agency or an official non-profit. None of them charge you to search or to claim. Where a tool recently changed, it's flagged so you don't waste time on something that no longer exists.

Read this first: if any site asks for a fee — or a percentage of your money — to find, release, or speed up what's yours, it is not the official source. Close it. The links below are the real ones, and they're free.

1. State unclaimed property (start here — most people's biggest hit)

What it is: Money a business couldn't return to you, turned over to your state, and now held in trust for you — forgotten bank accounts, uncashed checks, security and utility deposits, final paychecks, insurance payouts, refunds, stocks, and safe-deposit-box contents.

Who's likely owed: Almost everyone who's moved, changed jobs, closed an account, or had a relative pass away. About 1 in 7 Americans has unclaimed property waiting.

Official free links: - MissingMoney.com — <https://www.missingmoney.com> — the free, NAUPA-endorsed multi-state search. Run your name, maiden name, and every state you've lived in. - Unclaimed.org (NAUPA state map) — <https://unclaimed.org/search/> — links to each state's own official site.

What you need to claim: Your name(s) and addresses (current and former). To file a claim, the state will ask you to verify identity — typically your Social Security number, a photo ID, and proof of your connection to the address on file. Claims are filed directly with the state; it's free.

Heads-up: A few large states — most notably California, New York, and Pennsylvania — are not fully searchable on MissingMoney.com. Use the unclaimed.org map to reach their official sites directly (e.g., California's is the State Controller's office). The state holds the money with no expiration, so there's no deadline to claim it. (NAUPA / unclaimed.org, confirmed 2026.)

2. Unclaimed & undelivered IRS tax refunds

What it is: Federal tax refunds that were never delivered (the check bounced back, or you moved), plus refunds for years you were owed money but never filed a return to claim it.

Who's likely owed: Anyone who moved without forwarding mail, had withholding but didn't file a return, or qualified for a refundable credit (like the EITC) and never claimed it.

Official free links: - IRS "Where's My Refund?" — <https://www.irs.gov/refunds> — check the status of a refund and start a refund trace for a check that never arrived. - USA.gov unclaimed-tax-refunds guide — <https://www.usa.gov/unclaimed-tax-refunds> — the official overview for undelivered and unclaimed refunds.

What you need to claim: Your Social Security number, filing status, and the exact refund amount to check status. For an undelivered check, request a refund trace. For an unfiled year, file the return — the return itself is the refund claim.

The deadline that bites: Under IRC § 6511, you generally have 3 years from the original filing deadline (or 2 years from when the tax was paid, whichever is later) to claim a refund. Miss it and the money is forfeited to the Treasury. If you think an old year owes you a refund, act now — the clock does not stop. (IRC § 6511; IRS refund tools confirmed live for the 2026 filing season.)

3. Old pensions (PBGC)

What it is: Pension benefits you earned but were never paid when a plan ended. The Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation — a federal agency — holds unclaimed benefits from terminated pension plans and runs a free search.

Who's likely owed: Anyone who worked for a company with a traditional (defined-benefit) pension that later shut down, merged, or went bankrupt — especially decades ago.

Official free link: - PBGC unclaimed retirement benefits search — <https://www.pbgc.gov/workers-retirees/find-unclaimed-retirement-benefits/search-unclaimed>

What you need to claim: Search by your last name and the last four digits of your Social Security number. If there's a match, PBGC walks you through verifying identity and your work history with the plan. The database is updated quarterly. Help line: 1-800-400-7242.

(PBGC unclaimed benefits search, confirmed live and updated 2026.)

4. Lost 401(k)s and abandoned retirement plans (DOL)

What it is: Retirement accounts you left behind at former employers, and accounts in plans that were "abandoned" (the employer disappeared without properly closing the plan). Created under SECURE 2.0, the Department of Labor now runs a national locator.

Who's likely owed: Anyone who's changed jobs and left a 401(k) behind, or whose old employer went out of business.

Official free links: - Retirement Savings Lost and Found (DOL/EBSA) — <https://lostandfound.dol.gov> — search for retirement accounts tied to former employers. - EBSA Abandoned Plan Database — <https://www.askebsa.dol.gov/AbandonedPlanSearch/> — find plans terminated under DOL abandoned-plan procedures.

What you need to claim: Log in via the federal Login.gov identity system to search the Lost and Found database. For an abandoned plan, the search identifies the qualified termination administrator handling the payout, whom you then contact.

Honest limit: The Lost and Found database is brand new and still being populated — plan reporting is voluntary, so it doesn't yet cover everyone (DOL itself expects early coverage to be partial). If you come up empty, also contact former employers and plan administrators directly, and check state unclaimed property (Section 1) for rolled-over balances. (DOL Retirement Savings Lost and Found, launched late 2024 under SECURE 2.0; confirmed live 2026, coverage still expanding.)

5. Failed banks (FDIC)

What it is: Deposits and funds left behind when an FDIC-insured bank failed and the money wasn't claimed during the resolution.

Who's likely owed: Anyone who had an account at a bank that failed and didn't move all their money out.

Official free link: - FDIC Unclaimed Funds search — <https://closedbanks.fdic.gov/funds/> — search by name, business name, or check number.

What you need to claim: Search by name; if there's a match, FDIC provides the claim instructions for that failed institution. Help line: 1-888-206-4662 (option 2).

Heads-up: Funds are considered "unclaimed" if not claimed within 18 months of the bank's failure, after which the FDIC may transfer them to the state unclaimed property office — so also check Section 1. (FDIC unclaimed funds, confirmed 2026.)

6. Failed credit unions (NCUA)

What it is: Share-account (deposit) money left behind when a federally insured credit union was liquidated. The National Credit Union Administration holds and pays these out.

Who's likely owed: Anyone who had an account at a credit union that closed or was liquidated.

Official free link: - NCUA Unclaimed Deposits — <https://ncua.gov/support-services/conservatorships-liquidations/unclaimed-deposits>

What you need to claim: Check the NCUA's list of liquidated credit unions and the current unclaimed-deposits list; follow the filing instructions for your institution.

Heads-up: As with failed banks, share accounts claimed within the 18-month insurance period are paid in full; after that, unclaimed shares become uninsured and any payment is pro-rata. Don't sit on it. (NCUA Asset Management & Assistance Center, confirmed 2026.)

7. Matured & unredeemed US savings bonds

What it is: Paper savings bonds (Series E/EE/I) that have stopped earning interest but were never cashed — often bought decades ago and forgotten in a drawer, or by a relative for a child.

Who's likely owed: Anyone who was given savings bonds as a child, or who's settling an older relative's estate. All Series E bonds and older Series EE bonds have fully matured and earn nothing more — cashing them is pure recovery.

Official free links: - State unclaimed property via Unclaimed.org — <https://unclaimed.org/search/> — this is now the official route to search for unclaimed Treasury securities. - TreasuryDirect — Treasury Hunt info page — <https://www.treasurydirect.gov/savings-bonds/treasury-hunt/> — explains the change and how to cash bonds you physically hold.

What you need to claim: If you physically hold the bonds, redeem them at TreasuryDirect (or many banks). If they're lost, file FS Form 1048 ("Claim for Lost, Stolen, or Destroyed Savings Bonds") with TreasuryDirect.

 IMPORTANT CHANGE (verify if you saw an older guide): The standalone Treasury Hunt® search tool was retired on September 30, 2025. Searches for unclaimed (matured, unredeemed) Treasury securities are now handled through individual states' unclaimed property programs — start at unclaimed.org. Do not rely on a "TreasuryHunt.gov search" that an older article may mention; it no longer performs that search. (TreasuryDirect, confirmed retired Sept. 30, 2025; routing to state unclaimed property per SECURE 2.0.)

8. Lost life insurance policies (NAIC)

What it is: A free service from the National Association of Insurance Commissioners that searches participating insurers for a deceased person's life insurance policy or annuity.

Who's likely owed: Beneficiaries and family members of someone who passed away who believe a policy existed but can't find it.

Official free link: - NAIC Life Insurance Policy Locator — <https://eapps.naic.org/life-policy-locator/>

What you need to claim: You request a search as an authorized representative (e.g., beneficiary, executor) of the deceased insured. You'll provide the deceased's identifying details and a death certificate. Participating insurers check their records and contact you if there's a match; payout then goes through the insurer's normal claim process.

Note: This tool is specifically for deceased policyholders — it's not for finding a policy on yourself. It's free; insurers respond within a set window. (NAIC Life Insurance Policy Locator, confirmed 2026.)

9. FHA / HUD mortgage insurance refunds

What it is: A refund of part of the up-front FHA mortgage insurance premium you paid, owed when an FHA-insured loan is paid off or refinanced early under certain rules.

Who's likely owed: Anyone who had an FHA-insured mortgage and later sold the home, refinanced (especially into another FHA loan), or paid the loan off.

Official free link: - HUD "Does HUD Owe You a Refund?" — <https://entp.hud.gov/dsrs/refunds/> — search by last name or FHA case number.

What you need to claim: Search the HUD lookup by name or FHA case number. If a refund shows, submit your documentation to HUD (email sf.premiums@hud.gov or via the Premium Refund upload page). Status line: 1-800-697-6967.

Eligibility depends on timing. For FHA loans endorsed on or after December 8, 2004, a refund is generally due only if you refinanced into a new FHA-insured loan, and none is due after the third year of insurance. Older loans follow different (longer) windows. HUD states clearly you do not need to pay a third party to claim this. (HUD FHA premium refund rules, confirmed 2026 — confirm your loan's specific window with HUD.)

10. Class-action settlement payouts

What it is: Money set aside to pay consumers harmed by a company's conduct — from data breaches to deceptive billing — that you can claim if you're a class member.

Who's likely owed: Anyone who used a product or service named in a settlement during the covered period (you'll often have received a notice by email or mail).

Official free links: - FTC refunds page — <https://www.ftc.gov/enforcement/refunds> — the official list of active refund programs the FTC is running, with the legitimate claim link for each. - The court-appointed settlement administrator's official site — for any specific case, the claim site named in your notice or court order is the only legitimate place to file.

What you need to claim: Proof you're a class member (account/order info, the notice ID, or a self-certification, depending on the settlement) before the claim deadline stated in the notice.

Honesty flag: There is no single official US government database of all class-action settlements. Be careful — many "settlement" aggregator websites are commercial and not official. For FTC cases, use the FTC refunds page above. For other settlements, only use the administrator site named in your official notice or court documents, and never pay to "claim" a settlement. (FTC refunds program, confirmed 2026; no official universal aggregator exists.)

11. Utility, rental & other security deposits

What it is: Refundable deposits — utility (electric/gas/water), rental security deposits, and similar — that a company couldn't return to you and turned over to the state.

Who's likely owed: Anyone who's moved and left a utility account or rental, especially if you didn't get a forwarding-address refund.

Official free links: - State unclaimed property via MissingMoney.com — <https://www.missingmoney.com> — utility and deposit refunds escheat to the state and show up here. - Unclaimed.org state map — <https://unclaimed.org/search/>

What you need to claim: Same as Section 1 — these flow into the state unclaimed property system, so search there. For a recent move, also contact the utility or landlord directly first; deposits only escheat after a dormancy period.

Note: Utility and rental deposits aren't a separate database — they're a category of state unclaimed property. We list them separately because people forget they're owed them. Search Section 1's tools with old account names and addresses. (State unclaimed property acts, confirmed 2026.)

The 30-Minute Search Workflow

The point of an order is simple: do the fast, high-odds, no-documents-needed searches first, and save the ones that need paperwork or apply only to specific situations for later. If you only have ten minutes today, do Steps 1–3 — that's where most people find money.

Keep your tracker open as you go (`unclaimed-money-tracker.csv` or the printable page). Add a row for every hit, even a "maybe."

Round 1 — The five-minute wins (everyone does these)

Step 1 • State unclaimed property — `missingmoney.com` (~5 min) Search your full name, then your maiden name, then every state you've ever lived in. If you've lived in California, New York, or Pennsylvania, also search those states' own sites via `unclaimed.org/search/` — they're not fully on MissingMoney. Log every match. This is the single most common source of a real hit.

Step 2 • IRS refund check — `irs.gov/refunds` (~3 min) If you're expecting a refund or ever moved without forwarding your mail, check "Where's My Refund?" and start a refund trace for anything missing. If there's a year you had income withheld but never filed, note it — you may be owed a refund (but the 3-year clock applies, so flag the deadline).

Step 3 • Search for relatives' money too (~5 min) Run Steps 1–2 for a deceased parent or spouse if you're handling their affairs, and note the NAIC life-insurance locator (Step 8) for them. A lot of "found money" is a relative's, not your own.

Round 2 — The job-and-money-history searches (~10 min)

Step 4 • Old pensions — `pbgc.gov` unclaimed search Search your last name + last four of your SSN. Worth doing if you ever worked somewhere with a traditional pension, especially a company that later closed.

Step 5 • Lost 401(k)s — `lostandfound.dol.gov` If you've changed jobs and might have left a 401(k) behind, search the DOL Lost and Found. (It's new and incomplete — if it's empty, also contact old employers directly.)

Step 6 • Failed banks & credit unions — `closedbanks.fdic.gov/funds` and `ncua.gov` Only relevant if a bank or credit union you used failed/closed. Quick to check by name.

Round 3 — The situation-specific searches (do the ones that apply)

Step 7 • Savings bonds — `unclaimed.org/search/` If you (or a relative) were ever given paper savings bonds, search state unclaimed property. If you physically have old bonds, redeem them at TreasuryDirect — many have fully matured and earn nothing more. (The old Treasury Hunt tool was retired Sept. 30, 2025 — use `unclaimed.org` now.)

Step 8 • Lost life insurance — `eapps.naic.org/life-policy-locator/` Only for a deceased person whose policy you can't find. Request a search as the beneficiary/executor; you'll need a death certificate.

Step 9 • FHA/HUD refund — `entp.hud.gov/dsrs/refunds/` Only if you ever had an FHA-insured mortgage that you sold, refinanced, or paid off. Search by last name or FHA case number.

Step 10 • Class-action settlements — `ftc.gov/enforcement/refunds` Check the FTC's active-refunds list, and watch your email/mail for settlement notices. Only file through the official administrator site named in a notice — never a "claim your settlement" ad.

Step 11 • Utility & rental deposits Already covered by your Step 1 search (these escheat to the state). For a recent move, contact the old utility or landlord directly — deposits only hit the state after a dormancy period.

After the sprint

- File the instant ones today — state property and an IRS trace are often minutes.
- Gather documents for the rest — ID, old account numbers, death certificate (insurance), FHA case number, repair/settlement notices.
- Set a follow-up date on every row that's waiting, and check your tracker weekly.
- Re-run the free searches every 6–12 months. New money is reported to the states constantly — today's empty search can be next year's hit.

Remember the rule: every front door here is free. If a "finder" offers to recover any of this for a percentage, you can do it yourself for nothing using the exact links above.

How to Use the Claim Tracker

The tracker turns a pile of "I should look into that" into a list that actually gets money back. One row per claim. Each row tells you where it is, what it's worth, and the one next thing to do.

You get it two ways — use whichever fits you: - unclaimed-money-tracker.csv — import into Google Sheets, Excel, or Notion (digital, sortable, runs totals). - 04-printable-tracker.md — print and fill in by hand.

The columns

Column	What to put in it	Example
source	Which of the 11 sources this claim is from	State unclaimed property
account / claim name	Plain description of the specific claim	Old checking acct, First Regional, closed ~2018
$ estimated	Your best guess of what you're owed (a plain number — no $ sign, so totals work)	240.00
date searched	When you ran the search	2026-06-11
claim filed (y/n)	Have you actually filed the claim yet?	n
date filed	When you filed it	2026-06-13
status	Where the claim is in the flow (see below)	Filed
$ recovered	What you've actually gotten back (starts at 0)	0
follow-up date	The next date you'll check on or chase it	2026-07-01

Why $ estimated and $ recovered have no dollar sign: so your spreadsheet treats them as numbers and can add them up. In Google Sheets you can format the display as currency — just keep the stored value a plain number.

The status flow

Use these exact words in the status column so you (and any total/filter) stay consistent:

Status	Meaning
To search	On your list, not searched yet
Searched — possible match	Found something that might be yours; confirming
Searched — nothing found	No hit (keep the row — re-search in 6–12 months)
Filed	Claim submitted — waiting on them
Need documents	A real match, but you must gather ID / death cert / account proof first
Recovered	Money received — put the amount in $ recovered
Closed — no recovery	Dead end or not owed. Keeps your open list honest

Set it up in Google Sheets (free)

1. Open Google Sheets → File → Import → Upload → choose `unclaimed-money-tracker.csv` → Replace spreadsheet (or "Insert new sheet").
2. Freeze the header row: View → Freeze → 1 row.
3. Format money columns: select the `$ estimated` and `$ recovered` columns → Format → Number → Currency.
4. Add a running total: in an empty cell below the `$ recovered` column, enter `=SUM()` around that column's range — that's your total recovered so far.
5. Sort by follow-up date (Data → Sort range) so the next thing to chase is always on top.

For the operator: to hand this to buyers as a one-click "make your own copy" link, open your finished Google Sheet → Share → set to "Anyone with the link – Viewer" → copy the URL and change the end from `/edit...` to `/copy`. That link prompts each buyer to copy it into their own Drive. (See the delivery note in the listing copy.)

Set it up in Notion (optional)

1. Create a new page → type `/table` → Table — Full page.
2. Add a column for each header above; set $ estimated and $ recovered to type Number (format: Dollar), status to Select (add the options above), and the dates to type Date.
3. Import the CSV (`•••` menu → Merge with CSV) to pull the rows in, or add rows by hand.
4. Add a filter for status is not Recovered and not Closed to see only open claims; add a sum on $ recovered at the bottom.

The daily discipline (this is the part that pays)

1. Brain-dump every possible claim first — even vague ones. Status To `search`.
2. Work the search workflow (`02-search-workflow.md`) and log results.
3. One next action per open row — the follow-up date answers "when do I touch this again?"
4. Log money the day it lands — set status Recovered, fill $ recovered. People skip this; it's the part that makes the total real.
5. Re-search the free sources every 6–12 months — states get new money reported constantly.

Printable Claim Tracker

Print this page and fill it in by hand, or use it as a worksheet alongside the digital tracker. One row per claim. The status words to use: To search · Searched (possible match) · Searched (nothing) · Filed · Need documents · Recovered · Closed.

[illegible]

Total recovered so far: $ _____
