

Airline Refund Cheat-Sheet — Cash, Not a Voucher

Since the U.S. DOT's 2024 automatic-refund rule (in force 2026), airlines must refund you in CASH to your original payment method — not a voucher — in these situations. Print it and keep it in your travel folder.

✓ When you're owed your fare back

When the airline cancels or "significantly changes" your flight and you decline the rebooking, you're owed your fare back (plus taxes & fees). A "significant change" includes:

- ☐ Departure/arrival time moves more than 3 hours (domestic) or more than 6 hours (international)
- ☐ Your departure or arrival airport changes
- ☐ They add a connection or stop that wasn't there
- ☐ You're downgraded to a lower class of service
- ☐ (Disability) a plane swap to a less accessible aircraft

✓ Other money they owe you

- ☐ Late checked bag — refund of the bag fee if it's not delivered within 12 hours (domestic) or 15–30 hours (international). You must file a mishandled-baggage report at the airport.
- ☐ A paid extra you didn't get — Wi-Fi, seat selection / extra legroom, or in-flight entertainment that didn't work → refund of that fee.

How fast they must pay

The exact words to use

Say or write this to the airline:

"My flight was [canceled / changed by more than 3 hours / my bag arrived more than 12 hours late]. Under the DOT's automatic-refund rule, I'm requesting a full refund to my original payment method — not a voucher. Please confirm the refund and the timeframe."

If they stall — escalate (free)

1. Ask in writing and reference "the DOT automatic-refund rule."
2. File a free DOT complaint: transportation.gov/airconsumer
3. Paid by card? You can also dispute the charge with your card issuer.

⚠ Heads up: these are U.S. DOT rules. Flights to or from Europe may also be covered by separate EU rules (EU261) — sometimes worth even more.
